Globe & Waves

Travel Agency Website — Project Documentation

1. Introduction

Globe & Waves is a simple and attractive travel agency website created using HTML, CSS, and JavaScript. It introduces visitors to travel destinations, holiday packages, and sample itineraries. The website also includes a travel inquiry form so visitors can share their trip preferences. Its nature-inspired colors and travel images make the website welcoming and easy to explore.

2. Features

The website includes a navigation bar with links to its main sections, a hero banner, destination cards for the Maldives, Kerala, and the Swiss Alps, and holiday package cards. It presents a sample three-day itinerary and an inquiry form with fields for name, email, destination, trip duration, travel date, and travel ideas. CSS hover effects, responsive layouts, and a simple JavaScript alert improve the user experience.

3. Applications

This website can be used as a basic online presentation for a travel agency or tourism project. It helps visitors explore destination ideas, compare sample packages, view a suggested itinerary, and prepare a travel inquiry. It can also serve as a learning project for students practicing HTML structure, CSS styling, responsive design, and JavaScript form handling.

4. Future Scope

The website can be enhanced by connecting the inquiry form to a database or email service, adding user accounts, and enabling real package bookings. More destinations, filters, customer reviews, maps, payment options, and live availability information could also be included. These improvements would make the website more useful as a real travel-planning platform.

5. Conclusion

Globe & Waves demonstrates how HTML, CSS, and JavaScript can be combined to create a neat and responsive travel website. It presents travel information in an organized way and provides a simple inquiry interaction. This project strengthens basic web development skills and offers a foundation for adding more advanced travel services in the future.
